

REMOTE WORK POLICY

Flexible & Hybrid Working Guidelines

Policy Owner	Human Resources
Applies To	Eligible employees and approved remote/hybrid workers
Effective Date	01 September 2026
Review Cycle	Annually or when business requirements change
Version	1.0

1. Purpose

This policy establishes a consistent framework for remote and hybrid work arrangements. It aims to provide flexibility while maintaining productivity, collaboration, information security, employee accountability, and business continuity.

2. Scope

This policy applies to employees whose roles are suitable for remote or hybrid working and who have received approval under the organization's applicable procedures. Certain roles may require regular or full-time presence at an office or other designated workplace.

3. Definitions

Remote Work: Performing assigned duties from an approved location outside the organization's office.

Hybrid Work: A working arrangement combining office-based and remote work.

Approved Work Location: A location declared and authorized for remote work, subject to company requirements.

4. Eligibility and Approval

- Remote work is subject to role suitability, business requirements, team coordination, performance expectations, and management approval.
- Approval may be granted on a regular hybrid basis, for specific days, or for temporary circumstances.
- Approval is not an automatic employee entitlement unless expressly provided by employment terms or applicable law.
- The organization may modify, suspend, or withdraw a remote-work arrangement when business, operational, security, or performance requirements justify the change.

5. Working Hours and Availability

- Employees must follow their assigned working hours and remain available through approved communication channels during core working hours.
- Employees should attend scheduled meetings, respond within reasonable business timelines, and maintain accurate calendar availability.
- Any temporary change to working hours should be communicated to and approved by the reporting manager where required.
- Overtime, shift work, or work outside normal hours remains subject to applicable company rules and authorization requirements.

6. Attendance and Leave

- Remote work does not replace or alter the organization's leave policy.
- Employees who are unavailable because of illness, personal leave, or another approved absence must follow the standard leave-request and notification process.
- An employee should not treat an approved remote-work day as a substitute for taking leave when they are unable to work.
- Attendance records and leave balances must be maintained accurately in the designated HR system.

7. Performance and Productivity

- Employees are responsible for meeting role-specific goals, deadlines, quality standards, and service expectations regardless of work location.
- Managers should evaluate performance based primarily on outcomes, responsibilities, collaboration, and agreed objectives rather than physical presence alone.
- Employees must promptly communicate blockers, delays, dependencies, or resource requirements.

8. Communication and Collaboration

- Employees must use approved corporate communication and collaboration tools for business activities.
- Employees should maintain professional communication standards in email, messaging, video meetings, and other workplace channels.
- Teams may establish agreed collaboration windows for meetings, handoffs, and urgent coordination.
- Employees may be required to attend important in-person meetings, training sessions, team events, or business activities with reasonable notice.

9. Work Environment and Equipment

- Employees are responsible for maintaining a reasonably safe, quiet, and suitable workspace that supports professional work.
- Company-issued devices and equipment must be used primarily for authorized business purposes and handled with appropriate care.
- Employees must report damaged, lost, or malfunctioning company equipment promptly.
- Employees should not allow unauthorized persons to access company devices, documents, credentials, or confidential information.

10. Information Security and Data Protection

- Employees must follow all applicable information-security, privacy, access-control, and acceptable-use requirements while working remotely.
- Company systems should be accessed using approved authentication methods and secure connections.
- Confidential information must not be exposed to family members, visitors, public spaces, or unauthorized individuals.
- Employees must immediately report suspected security incidents, lost devices, unauthorized access, or accidental disclosure through the designated security process.

11. Approved Work Location and Travel

Remote work should normally be performed from an approved location. Working from another city, country, public location, or while traveling may require prior approval because of tax, employment, security, insurance, data-protection, and operational considerations.

12. Health, Safety and Ergonomics

- Employees should maintain an appropriate workstation and follow reasonable ergonomic and safety practices.
- Any work-related incident occurring while working remotely should be reported according to the organization's health, safety, and incident-reporting procedures.
- Employees should take appropriate breaks and manage their working environment to support sustainable productivity.

13. Business Continuity

Employees working remotely must maintain reasonable connectivity and access to required systems. If internet, power, device, or other technical issues materially prevent work, the employee should notify the manager promptly and follow the team's continuity or backup-work arrangements.

14. Expenses

Reimbursement of internet, electricity, equipment, travel, or other remote-working expenses is subject to the organization's applicable expense and reimbursement rules. Employees should obtain required approval before incurring reimbursable expenses.

15. Confidentiality and Intellectual Property

All company information, documents, source code, customer information, intellectual property, credentials, and business materials remain subject to the organization's confidentiality and intellectual-property requirements regardless of where work is performed.

16. Non-Compliance

Failure to comply with this policy may result in corrective action, including modification or withdrawal of remote-work privileges and, where appropriate, disciplinary action in accordance with company procedures and applicable law.

17. Policy Exceptions

Exceptions must be approved by the appropriate authority and documented where necessary. Statutory employee rights and applicable legal requirements will prevail over conflicting provisions of this policy.

18. Responsibilities

- Employees: Maintain availability, productivity, security, professional conduct, and compliance with approved working arrangements.
- Managers: Assess eligibility, coordinate team coverage, set clear expectations, and review arrangements fairly.
- HR: Maintain policy guidance, support managers and employees, and review the policy periodically.
- IT/Security: Provide and maintain approved technical controls and support secure remote access.

19. Compliance

This policy is a general organizational framework. Where applicable law, employment contracts, regulatory requirements, or binding company rules provide a different requirement, the applicable legal or contractual requirement will prevail.
